

Nicole Hancock is a partner and a trial attorney in the Boise office. Nicole chairs Stoel Rives' Food and Agribusiness Initiative. A "smart and tenacious lawyer," who is "not afraid to tackle tough cases," according to a Chambers USA survey, Nicole represents corporate clients in a variety of legal issues that include contractual disputes, trade secret defense and enforcement, intellectual property enforcement and litigation, licensing disputes, and other corporate matters. Nicole has successfully tried cases in both state and federal court litigation and appeals, mediated resolutions, prelitigation evaluations and opinions, and litigation consultation services. Nicole's prior experience as Corporate Counsel for a global company gives her the ability to draw from her business knowledge in representing clients in various litigation matters. She takes the time to get to know her clients and their business needs, and she works to find the best result for her clients' businesses. Nicole's legal know-how and courtroom experience allow her to develop and implement winning litigation strategies.
